Who are you?

You are someone who knows that the best way to experience a place is on two wheels, and you're excited at the prospect of helping other folks to make incredible memories at the speed of the bike.

You understand that planning and preparation are keys to success. You are capable and fit enough to lead from your bike, and also understand the importance of days driving the support vehicle.

You can whip up a mean picnic lunch – or move to plan B at the café when circumstances dictate. You understand the importance of sticking to the plan yet you're flexible and resourceful.

You can speak to people from all walks of life and understand what motivates them to experience new destinations by bike. You can look after them, and can work with your fellow guides to support them providing camaraderie and motivation, always being in the right place at the right time and even patching them up if necessary.

You are looking for regular, reliable work with a professional tour operator who will have your back, pay you fairly and support your personal and professional development.

We all love riding but if you're looking for something that's "all about the bike" and you just want to ride, this might not be for you. There's a whole lot more to guiding and leading tours – including driving, logistics and admin before, during and after, on what can be long, demanding, but ultimately rewarding days. We see this as a skilled profession and we take it seriously.
